I TIMOTHY

"Wisdom for a Young Pastor"

The tone and content of Paul's letters to Timothy and Titus indicate his awareness that the remaining time of his ministry and life was probably short. He had invested in these young men and felt confident leaving church leadership to them – which included dealing with problems that were developing in the churches.

With growing organization in the churches came increased complexity. Positions were established, and some people became more interested in the prestige of the office than in being a useful servant of Jesus and of the people.
